

A VILLAGE-BASED ORPHAN CARE PROJECT

ANNUAL NEWSLETTER 2017

Dear Donors and Friends,

Malawi Children's Village has celebrated its 20th anniversary! In 1996, MCV was a pile of bricks and a dream. Malawi was in the throes of an AIDS-induced nightmare that had produced 800,000 orphans who were experiencing high rates of hunger and death. Perhaps worst of all, hope was close to extinction.

The dream of MCV was to restore hope to orphans in 38 villages along the southwestern shore of Lake Malawi. There were more than 4,000 orphans in these villages with an average of six orphans living in households headed by grandparents and others. The death rate from malaria alone was about 10%, and few orphans could even think about going to school.

MCV was the product of collaboration between former Peace Corps volunteers and Malawians. Together, they decided to develop a village-based orphan care program designed to provide support to households willing to care for orphans. The combination of chief-appointed volunteers in each village and a small central staff became the core of that support system. Soon, a clinic was opened, a nutrition center established, and regular outreach visits began providing food supplements, clothing, health education, and training in irrigation/food sustainability. Later, new programs and partnerships were established, and secondary and technical schools were opened.

Today, twenty years later, much of the dream has become a reality. More than 15,000 orphans have received services (including 3,000 currently enrolled), households now have an average of only two orphans, the death rate from malaria in young children has plummeted by 80% (due to treated bednets), and almost 85% of orphans are attending school!

While the Malawian staff and board have made all this happen, it would not have occurred without the continuous and generous support of hundreds of donors across the USA whose generosity is enhancing the lives of orphans and restoring hope to the 38 villages served by MCV.

While we cannot serve all of Malawi's orphans, we are called to do what we can, and you are making that possible. We invite all of you to become part of the MCV dream through your donations, well wishes, and prayers. The dream will not remain a reality without you.

Tsalani Bwino.

Nature English Club: Faculty sponsors Peter Valani and Albert Jafali have 40 enthusiastic students focusing on environmental conservation.

During a field trip to Lake Chilwa they learned about the deforestation of the lake edges, the siltation and drying of the lake, and the decreased wildlife diversity. They are hoping to visit Liwonde National Park and Maldeco Fisheries near MCV in future terms. They are also planning a tree planting program and the production of an annual newsletter with poetry and articles written by students.

Started by board member Frances Vitaglione, the Nature English Club allows Gracious students to practice their English, and supplement their regular classroom learning with trips that focus on environmental issues.

THE VILLAGES OF MCV'S VILLAGE-BASED CARE: MTIMBUKA

By Mary Pomeroy and Frances Vitaglione

Volunteer Mike
Horne and T!AN (an MCV partner organization) built this home for a Mtimbuka family in which some members have albinism. MCV helps ensure vulnerable children
in the village have housing, education,
and healthcare.

MCV supports orphans and vulnerable children from 38 villages in Mangochi, Malawi. Mtimbuka is our fifth village to be profiled in this series. Read the others at www.malawichildrensvillage.org

Mtimbuka has a population of 1,682 people, with 98 orphans supported by MCV. As in most villages, the people living in the village are mostly subsistence farmers. Following harvesting of the corn, referred to as maize, it is common to see the women breaking off the kernels into their woven baskets. These kernels are then dried on large woven mats in front of their homes before going to the nearby mill for grinding into flour. This maize flour becomes the sustenance for their daily meal of nsima and boiled leafed vegetables. Nsima is maize flour cooked to the consistency of a stiff porridge so that it can be picked up with their fingers, carefully rolled into a ball in the palm of their hand and then dipped into the vegetable broth. It is quite an art to rotate this maize meal porridge into a uniform ball.

Treated bed nets for Malaria prevention are provided by MCV for children under five years of age in the village to help prevent the consequences of this devastating disease. In addition, as with all villages, MCV pays for orphans to visit the health clinic when necessary, and support families with housing and food support as needed.

To help achieve its mission, MCV ensures that all orphans and other vulnerable children have access to education. School uniforms are provided for the 86 children that are school age. Most children attend Koche Primary school, the nearest government run primary school. Koche is a large school, and several children from outlying villages attend the school as well. In addition, three students from Mtimbuka are being provided scholarships to attend Gracious Secondary School at MCV. There are also five students attending other secondary schools in the area.

In addition to the 98 orphans in the village MCV also supports other vulnerable children, such as people with albinism. Albinism is an inherited genetic condition that reduces the amount of melanin pigment in the skin, hair, and/or eyes. People with albinism in Malawi (often referred to as albinos) need to be checked and monitored as the hot sun affects their eyes and skin without adequate protection. People with albinism in Malawi can also face significant social stigma and in some cases violence from other community members. For these reasons, children with albinism are considered vulnerable and are supported by MCV to ensure they receive medical care, housing, and education.

The Village Volunteer's comments about his village include: "I am happy to see that through my help more orphans have been educated and are working in different organizations. I like my job mostly when I get involved in helping build houses for orphans, elders and also when I help in taking orphans to hospital when they are sick. The program of building houses for people is a very important service and people are very thankful in my village seeing houses built for the needy."

WE Club: The Nature English Club isn't the only club at Gracious. The Women's Empowerment (WE) Club continues to support female students in their studies to ensure they succeed. The club now has 56 students. Students receive extra tutoring, attend lectures and debates, and recently took a trip to Malawi University at Cholo. All Form IV (12th grade) WE Club students passed the most recent MSCE examinations.

WE Club t-shirts read "Girls' empowerment through education."

I was honored to be in Mangochi with my family on July 1, 2017 where several hundred people, including the Mangochi District Commissioner and chiefs from the 38-villages served by MCV, gathered at the beautiful campus to celebrate MCV's 20-year anniversary. A tour was provided of Gracious Secondary School as well as displays highlighting key programs, including education on health, nutrition and food sustainability, that are provided to the 38 villages. From these villages, dedicated volunteers successfully focus MCV's efforts to support families caring for orphans and vulnerable children.

The formal stage for the dignitaries was flanked by two large tents with chairs that were all occupied, creating an impressive forum not typical in Malawi, which underscored the importance of the occasion. The program included comments from the Mangochi District Commissioner, head chief, Seneca Falls Rotarian, local and USA board members, head village volunteer, MCV / Gracious alumni, as well as traditional singing and dancing.

Here is an excerpt from the words that I shared in Chichewa (translated):

"My father, a pastor, recently told me that all people who are alive have troubles. Yet, our troubles become easier to bear when we care for one another and take action. MCV cares. You care. You take action. I have never met nicer or happier people than in Malawi.

Together, we make a difference and provide hope. Hope, caring and education are what will change the future for our children.

Peace and hope be with you always, even in the midst of challenges that remind us that we are alive.

To the Malawi board, the MCV staff and teachers and to the volunteers from every village:

Thank you for all that you have done. Thank you for all that you will do.

You make a difference.

You are MCV."

WHY NOT HELP EVEN MORE?

By Ruth Nighswander

Dick Keenan's efforts this family and nine others have new homes. Fundraising for MCV can be one of the most meaningful ways you can help.

Thanks to

Dick Keenan, a retired attorney, wanted to support MCV by being in Malawi and doing something useful. He also wanted to give his nephew, Ryan, an experience to appreciate another culture and see how their lives differed or were the same. Giving $750 (through family and friends) to help build an orphan

house seemed like a small part. Why not help even more? To make a larger story smaller-he and Ryan went onto GoFundME site and soon had enough money to build 10 orphan houses and buy laptops for all 13 teachers at Gracious Secondary School. The first house they helped build (pictured) is in honor of his mother and has a plaque saying: "Mulungu akudalitseni nyumba iyi ndi onse okhala m'mwemo" (May God bless this house and all who enter). What a blessing to this orphan family!

Would you like to help even more?

MCV would not be the success that it is today were it not for dedicated volunteers, such as Dick Keenan, who have helped us reach out to others in support of MCV. We're happy to announce that on the new malawichildrensvillage.org we can now set up custom donation pages for your crowd funding projects.

Your custom webpage will be designed specifically for your fundraiser. The set up is simple and you can help choose the photos and text. You can even add videos if you'd like. The donations will be routed directly to MCV so all gifts will remain tax deductible. Hosting a fundraiser at a school? Running a race for MCV? Want to add MCV to your wedding registry? We'd love your help!

The Special Needs
Program at MCV is dramatically changing the lives of girls like Atuweni, pictured here with a group of school friends.

Change one life at a time ... Winnie (post-polio) walked on hands and feet for over 30 years: she now has a wheelchair. Benito (age 12), living with a rare neurological condition, has returned to school on an adapted rolling cart. He now uses a modified platform cane to take a few steps, and has able support at school. Mayankho lost his leg to a snake bite, but now has a prosthesis to walk to school and run with friends. As a teenager, Grace crawled around her village: following surgery and physical therapy, she walks with a walker.

For 10 years my husband and I have been involved with MCV. My training as a pediatric physical therapist has offered a skill which has evolved into a program for children with special needs, providing wheelchairs/walkers and other adapted equipment and offering transportation to the local hospital in Mangochi for "physio" (PT visits) for the infants / children. In its tenth year, the Special Needs Program is now fully integrated into MCV operations. As with other programs at MCV, the program provides villagebased care to orphans and other vulnerable children in the 38 villages. It provides health resources for families with infants/children (and for the children themselves) to become more mobile to attend school or to participate in family or village activities. Last year, the program became an official part of MCV. Here's how the program has grown and changed:

Village-Based Care: Outreach Volunteers from MCV have been trained to talk with the families, offering needed services. The "physio" at Mangochi Hospital offers advice and will go to a village to see families unable to travel.

Equipment Workshop: Mobility equipment first built at a Malawi prison workshop is now made at MCV's Vocational Program. The MCV Welding and Carpentry programs make repairs and modifications. The vocational curriculum now includes building and installing access ramps and adapted bathing areas at schools and homes. More than 55 wheelchairs, 100 walkers, and 200 chairs and standers have been built.

Cerebral Palsy (CP) Clinic: Until two years ago families were provided kwatcha (local currency) as fare to a weekly CP clinic at Mangochi Hospital; now MCV has provided space for the clinic. The physio/PT from Mangochi comes weekly to serve 25-30 families waiting under the mango tree; there are about 1,200 patient visits annually.

TREASURER'S REPORT

By Ruth Nighswander

Twenty years! As they say "we've come a long way, baby". That "we" includes not only staff and board members, but donors who have stood by through a growing process, assisted with extra food during famine, helped re-roof houses and schools after storms etc.

MCV is strictly donor driven and does not use government grants or contracts. Orphans are expected to attend school and graduate. "Giving back" is encouraged so they might help others in the community.

As a donor you are greatly appreciated no matter what the donation. We applaud your generosity. Thank you!!

MCV AND ROTARY

Thank You to Rotarians for Twenty Years of Partnership

Since Malawi Children's Village's formation in 1997 through the present, Rotarians have collaborated with MCV to make a difference in children's lives. Rotarians throughout the world, including Rotary clubs in Limbe, Malawi, Kansas City, Missouri, Fairport, New York and Palmer, Alaska, have collaborated with MCV on projects that have saved lives, improved maternal and child health, promoted sanitation, and provided educational opportunities. Hundreds of Rotarians have made these projects possible through their contributions to and grants from The Rotary Foundation. Rotarians are people of action for MCV. Zikomo, Rotary!

Twenty years later MCV's Village Volunteers continue to connect orphans and their care givers to vital services.

Donors and Friends: How is it that MCV is celebrating twenty years, when so many other NGOs have come and gone? The answer is not simple. MCV's longevity is due to the project's support from the local chiefs and the reliance on the Village Volunteers; also to the dedicated staff and board members - both past and present; and to the sustainability of income generating activities such as the MCV Sewing Program. Perhaps most of all however, MCV's success has been thanks to donors like you. While other NGOs rely on large grants that cause windfalls in one year and deficits in the next, MCV has always relied on a simple model of financial stability: We send out this annual newsletter and every year donors respond. You sustain the project. Please donate today so that MCV can continue to serve the orphans of Mangochi.

Thank you. Zikomo.
